COMPANION OF HONOUR

J.K. Rowling was appointed a Member of the Order of the Companions of Honour for her exceptional contribution to literature and philanthropy. The award is one of the highest honors bestowed by the British monarchy, recognizing individuals who have made a major impact in arts, science, medicine, or public service.

Rowling received this distinction from Prince William, the Duke of Cambridge, at an investiture ceremony held at Buckingham Palace. The Order of the Companions of Honour was originally established by King George V in 1917 and is limited to only 65 living members at any time, making it an exclusive recognition. Other famous recipients include Sir David Attenborough and Sir Ian McKellen. Rowling was honored not just for her literary achievements, but also for her charitable efforts, including her work with Lumos, an organization dedicated to helping disadvantaged children worldwide.
